

Ladies and Gentlemen,

With the new academic year, we are returning to the walls of the University. With this, returns the hope of reviving our academic community after a period of isolation which we were forced to undergo. This spurs our motivation to improve what is the essence of our relationship, namely, to consolidate this community at every level.

I hereby wish the research staff, academics, administrative employees as well as our students, without whom our work would not have no meaning, that by returning to the walls of the University, they contribute to creating its prosperity in every respect and can show mutual respect and kindness to each other.

Vivat Academia!
